The Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities is inviting Early Career Researchers to apply for funding for interdisciplinary conferences.

As state academy of Baden-Württemberg, the Young Academy of the Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities has promoted excellent young scientists in Baden-Württemberg for more than ten years in organizing international, interdisciplinary conferences through funding, organizational support, and scientific consulting.

The WIN-Conferences programme enables early career researchers to independently plan and conduct international, interdisciplinary conferences. Conferences that bring into contact early career researchers with the experts of the respective disciplines will receive preferential treatment. This entails appropriate conference formats and a limited number of participants.

In accordance with the Academy's mission, the conferences should foster dialog between established disciplines and thus need to focus on interdisciplinarity.

What we provide

- Funding up to € 11,000.
- Assistance with the independent planning and conducting of the conference by our experienced employees.
- The possibility to publish the conference proceeds.
- A location for up to 60 participants in the historic Old Town of Heidelberg.
- Assistance in production of conference and promotional material and promotion of the conference.

Who can apply?

At the time of applying you

- have finished your PhD
- are employed at or affiliated with a research institution in Baden-Württemberg.
- are not a tenured professor.

How to apply

Your conference needs to be conceived as an interdisciplinary venture. Please elaborate on the subject of the conference and why it can only be treated by an interdisciplinary conference.

Your application may not exceed five pages [Times New Roman 12pt, 1,15-spaced]. Please attach a programme, a budget (max. 1 page), and a CV with a list of publications (max. 2 pages per applicant).

You may submit your proposal in English or German.

The deadline for applications is May 12th, 2025. Please submit your application in a consolidated pdf file to Georg Wolff (hadw@hadw-bw.de) (subject "WIN-Konferenzen 2026"), who will also answer any questions you might have regarding applications.

The Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities is the State Academy of Baden-Württemberg. Founded in 1909, it is both a non-university research institution and a learned society. The Young Academy | HAdW has funded interdisciplinary research projects and conferences since 2002. It is funded through the Ministry of Science, Research and Arts Baden-Württemberg.
