FEMALE TALENTS IN SCIENCE: #THEPOWEROFCONNECTION

You are a female scientist, and you want to be your authentic self and find an empowering position as a leader and a researcher?

This workshop series will help you to make up your mind and nail the purpose that drives your professional career. A set-up of philosophical arguments and interactive exercises will help you see which mental models block, and which support, your ability to work and harmonise with others. Your individual professional challenges are sometimes systemic and sometimes network dependent. Our coach will show you the differences and how to deal with them. In this session we will focus on the dimensions of power that shape our professional lives and the frameworks you can use to empower yourself. Participants are invited to immerse themselves in deep talks to question long-established views, and to look at their career from different perspectives.

This workshop is aimed at both women scientists with leadership experience and those who would like to take on a leadership role. This workshop is moderated by one coach and hosted by the Falling Walls Foundation. The event is free of charge and limited to 25 participants. Register now to secure your place. Our goal is for you to leave the workshop feeling motivated and inspired by having gained actionable insights concerning leadership and personal growth.
